The decision to allow another important retailer to open premises in this part of Huddersfield is long overdue. Lidl is a high quality retailer, and its stores are well designed, and the area will benefit hugely from its presence on New Hey Road: at the moment, residents in this part of town must go all the way into the town centre, or travel to Halifax or Elland, to find a store offering comparable quality and choice (the smaller shops at Salendine Nook would not be adversely affected). The design for the new store is sensitive to the area, and there should be minimal disruption to traffic (given that fewer journeys will be required further afield). There is plenty of parking and lots of environmentally sensitive elements in the proposal.
