All for the idea of the Lidl, however, living on the new build estate I already know the difficulties of getting on and off the estate via turnstone way with the cars that park either side of the road that actually belong to the terrace houses on blackmoorfoot road. It's already an inconvenience that these cars believe they have the rights to park on our estate and the application wants to add more traffic to an existing issue. The entrance to the carpark should be directly from blackmoorfoot road further up the hill. There is already a junction that was there previously which is currently getting used as a private driveway for someone again, who lives in one of the terraced houses opposite. Why can't this junction be used instead? When purchasing my house I was not informed of any retail units, let alone ones with access from the site. If planning is approved for the current junction off turnstone way, a middle turning lane needs to be added to allow the residents of the estate to still gain access without getting stuck in supermarket traffic. Double yellow lines need to be implemented both sides of turnstone way at the entrance to stop people from parking here otherwise it will become near impossible to access the site
